Howdy Fellow Camellia and Azalea Enthusiasts and Those who will be . . . This Is

Since we meet and know most of our customers only through correspondence, and we rarely meet each other personally, we felt you would like to see what the fellow you are dealing with looks like and know something about his background. Cliff Harris is a watchmaker, engraver, jeweler, diamond setter and photographer. He has operated his own retail jewelry and camera store in Mobile, Ala. for more than a quarter of a century. Some of his civic services and activities are: He was one of the 23 members of the Mobile Junior Chamber of Commerce whose signature appears on the original charter of incorporation of the world famous Mobile Azalea Trail, Inc. His horticultural interest began shortly prior to that time. He is past president of the Mobile Kiwanis Club, twice past Potentate of Abba Temple Shrine, past President of the Mobile Civic Round Table, Charter member of Mobile Men's Camellia Club, Charter member of Mobiles Men's Garden Club, member of Men's Garden Club of America, a fellow of the Royal Horticultural Society of England, a life member of the American Camellia Society and other affiliations.

Strange Mysteries Revealed . . .

SURROUNDING Cliff Harris' Longview Nursery, Mobile, Alabama, U. S. A. The strange policies and actions of the founder, Robert O. Rubel, which people could not understand had good reason and foundation. For nearly 40 years Mr. Rubel has spent his entire time experimenting with the development of new varieties of camellias through cross-pollination and treating the seed with X-rays more than 25 years ago to challenge the chromosomes, etc. He has planted literally millions of seeds, some imported from Europe, China, Japan and many other places along with seed especially treated from Longview Nurseries plants.

He instituted a policy of not welcoming nor allowing Alabama people to visit his nursery and not selling in the state. All these years he collected through standing orders with book dealers all over the world, and other sources, any publications that had as much as one sentence or paragraph on camellias. He is reputed to have the most complete library on camellias in existence today.

Recognizing the many advantages of container-grown camellias, Mr. Rubel developed a successful method of growing them in containers from rooted cuttings and has sold container-grown camellias exclusively.

He studied topographical maps of the U. S. A. and foreign countries to determine areas where the soil, water and other conditions were or were not favorable to the growing of camellias and would not sell his camellias in areas not favorable except in a few instances where the customer would make special preparations to give them the extra attention and care needed in those places.

He has an alarm system all around his place and built his home far enough back from the road so when the alarm rang he would have time to come to the front of the house to meet anyone when they reached the house.

Occupants of cars with Alabama license plates were informed in a usually pleasant manner, he did not welcome or sell to Alabama people.

Out-of-state people would be welcomed and given a real entertaining visit.

Mr. Rubel was a charter member of the Mobile Kiwanis Club in 1919. Cliff Harris joined Kiwanis in 1939, the same year the Mobile Men's Camellia Club was organized in which Harris was a charter member, knowing very little about camellias.

Harris understood that Rubel knew camellias so he sought his friendship. He visited Rubel the third time before he was allowed or asked to get out of his car. After that Rubel welcomed Harris' visits and allowed him to display camellias from Longview at the annual Men's Camellia Club show with the understanding that he would not let anyone know where the blooms came from, but before he allowed him to do so he required Harris to purchase a minor interest in the business so he would be telling the truth when he exhibited them under his name.

Many years ago Rubel developed a culture which makes it possible to ship bare root camellias so treated with great success. He has shipped bare root camellias to China and Hilo, Hawaii which were in transit for more than a month without the loss of a plant.

The Longview story is tremendous but for lack of space we will sum up the logic behind the part we have told you.

The several reasons for Mr. Rubel not selling or allowing Alabama people to visit Longview Nursery was as simple as this:

First, camellias are so easy to grow in the field in this area he could not compete in price with his container-grown camellias here, but in the north and areas where field-grown camellias take several years to become established after digging, if they live at all, he was able to sell at good prices, all container-grown camellias he could produce.

If a scion or cutting of a new camellia gets out and someone else propagates it before patents are applied for then it is not patentable. So, Mr. Rubel protected his new varieties and had more time to develop them by not having local people take up his time.

By having these protected patentable new varieties when Mr. Rubel reached the age he did not feel able to continue the responsibility of operating his business, he received much more for it on account of the patentable new varieties. Mr. Rubel is still associated with us and the plants he loves at Longview as consultant.

It was Cliff Harris' faith in his and Mr. Rubel's judgment that these new varieties had great possibilities which is being borne out by the local, national and international interest and acceptance of the new varieties we have shown.

Many of our new varieties not released or shown first bloomed years ago.

The "Walter D. Bellingsworth" and "Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II" seed were planted in 1932. The Walter D. Bellingsworth first bloomed in 1948 and the Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II in 1943 which has given more than ample time to determine if they are meritorious.

We have discarded many beautiful new camellias because the growing habits were not the most desirable.

New Policies of Cliff Harris' Longview Nursery

Longview patented and most all known, rare and standard camellias will be sold at popular prices, retail and wholesale, in Alabama and all over the world. Our packing and shipping methods are one of our great achievements.

Container-grown camellias shipped any month of the year, field grown camellias, balled and burlapped or bare root camellias treated with special Longview root culture shipped or delivered in season, while plants are dormant, usually October thru March.

NOTE: We have listed many varieties under the several names by which they are known to help you avoid buying varieties you already have under another name.

It is common knowledge there is confusion in the names of Camellia Japonicas. Although it is well known in the trade who introduced most varieties, they are listed in many instances by some, under entirely different names. Until Cliff Harris instituted new policies at Longview Nursery all varieties were sold under lot numbers. All varieties are now listed under authentic names, as near as we can determine, otherwise we list them under the name which they are most generally known. In some instances the lot number given by Longview is the only name by which a variety is known, such as our Lot 59, one of our very fine varieties which is the parent plant of Dr. S. Peter Nyce, of Boston. His original parent plant was bought from Longview many years ago. It is widely known as Longview Lot 59. Our Lot 34-B is equally as popular and sought after.

Some of our new seedling introductions such as Roosevelt Blues are being listed under other names. For this and other good reasons we are patenting some of our best seedlings.

We carry on an extensive seedling program which is expensive when you consider that only about one really outstanding variety is obtained from possibly 5,000 to 10,000 seedlings. Usually it is from four to fifteen years before seedlings first bloom. They must be carefully watched and cared for until they bloom and if they show promise of being outstanding they are especially watched and tested, to prove their worthiness. It requires much experimenting, cross pollination and other treatments to produce unusual desirable new varieties, etc.

We are most fortunate to have Mr. Rubel associated with us as consultant. He has an invaluable reservoir of nearly half a century of experience and knowledge in Azaleas and Camellias. He has spent many months of 1954 in Europe visiting customers and people with whom he has corresponded for many years. He has visited all the book dealers, museums, and gardens both famous and otherwise, from one end of Europe to the other, studying growing methods and gaining information on Camellias and Azaleas. He visited Windsor Castle and saw the two plants of "HER MAJESTY QUEEN ELIZABETH II," we shipped to the Queen by Eastern Airlines and British Overseas Air Corp, March 22, 1954.

Visitors welcome 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sundays and other hours by appointment.

FREE special service of shifting container plants when you intend to continue growing them in containers. We will shift them to the next larger size container prior to shipment, which will relieve you from having to shift the plant again for approximately two years or more. Check special note on order blank.

Our container grown Camellias are purposefully dwarfed to produce more and finer blooms and among other advantages, that of occupying much less space per plant than field grown Camellias the same age. Many top show exhibitors and florists who grow and sell cut flowers as corsages, require Camellias actually grown in containers.

Growing Camellias is much like raising dogs. We use that example because it is well known that until a puppy reaches a certain age or stage of maturity its chance of survival is much less than after that age. The greatest amount of care is required during the first year of a dog's life. After that age they usually do not need much special care and are not subject to many diseases if properly cared for, during their early growing period. A dog or other animal will continue to grow at a much slower rate after maturity. The same is true of Camellias.

Camellias are hardwood plants, naturally slow growing. They can be forced to grow faster but do not reach their maturity with as much stamina as when not forced too much. They do not bloom as early or as well and are much less able to withstand changes in the weather or transplanting than are slower, properly grown plants.

The word "nursery" implies special care, which is necessary, until the plant has reached maturity. Then it should be ready to produce luxurious flowers and continue to do so through many years without much special care. While the plants are young, if grown in containers, they should be shifted often to slightly larger containers, until they reach maturity. After that they do not have to be shifted often and actually bloom sooner and continue to produce finer blooms if kept slightly root bound.

Field grown Camellias grow faster with less care than properly grown container Camellias, making it possible to furnish you much larger field grown Camellias for less money than container grown plants of the same age. The fact is that container grown plants bloom at a younger age and produce more and finer blooms. Although the Camellia plant is one of the most beautiful evergreens, the primary purpose in growing them is for their regal blooms and not for vegetative growth.

Mrs. Lehmberg is named for her grandmother, Mrs. Augusta Murdock Sikes, who was one of the four young Columbus matrons widowed by the War Between the States, and responsible for the origin of our Decoration Day. It was her grandmother's suggestion that the flowers be divided and placed on the northern graves as well as our own southern boys. This act of hers inspired Finch to write his immortal poem, "The Blue and the Gray."

Hints on Camellia and Azalea Culture, and Announcement on when Patented Camellias "Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II" and "Walter D. Bellingrath" will be released.

Where To Plant

Azaleas and Camellias thrive best in acid soil. A Ph of 5 to 6 is best for both.

Camellias can be grown in full sun, but the best exposure is filtered shade, such as trees, lath houses, etc. When planting a Camellia in full sun, it should be done in the early winter months in order to allow the plant to become established before the summer heat.

How To Plant

Dig a hole at least twice as deep and twice as big around as the size of the container or ball of the plant. Add 1-3 peat moss or leaf mold to soil taken from hole and mix thoroughly. If soil is heavy, such as clay, use at least 50 per cent peat moss or leaf mold. Fill the hole with sufficient amount of mixed soil so that after firming, the top of the plant ball will set at least one inch above the surrounding area. NEVER PLANT TOO DEEP. After setting plant in hole, fill with mixed soil and pack firmly. Make a basin around the plant from the surplus soil and give it a thorough watering. Place a two inch thick mulch of pine needles or leaves around the plant.

Watering

Do not allow plants to dry out at the roots, and even more important, never keep the soil soggy wet. Either condition can cause buds to drop and eventual loss of the plant. Always bear in mind that a Camellia or Azalea likes to be kept reasonably moist, but also requires good drainage.

Fertilizing

Camellias should be fertilized during the spring and summer prior to and while they are actively growing, beginning in March and not later than August. Three feedings in this period are sufficient, spaced 30 days apart. Any of the better known acid fertilizers may be used, making sure it provides a balanced meal for the plant of Nitrogen, Phosphate and Potash. It is good practice to use a 0-10-10 or 0-14-14 fertilizer in the fall for hardening off the plants and maturing the buds, etc. For amount to use, follow directions on package. NEVER OVER-FERTILIZE.

Shifting Container Camellias

If you grow your Camellias in containers as many of our customers do, there will come a time when shifting them to a large container becomes necessary. Shifting should be done immediately after the plant has finished blooming and before new growth starts. A lightweight compo should be used having a generous portion of sharp sand mixed with it to provide proper aeration and drainage. An excess of "pot-room" is not beneficial to the plant so it is important to shift to a new container only slightly larger than the old one.

It is essential to pack the new soil tight against the original ball of roots, with a square end stick, working the soil down around the roots firmly to prevent voids, open pockets or air spaces between the roots and sides of the pot. Always place a piece of broken pot over the drainage hole so that it will not become clogged. Write for specific or more complete cultural information.

Patented Camellias

"HER MAJESTY QUEEN ELIZABETH II" and "WALTER D. BELLINGRATH" will be released in the fall of 1955. Please do not send any money or checks until we announce the price at which they will be offered. However, if you desire these two outstanding new varieties we suggest you indicate such desire because the plants will be limited.

We are grafting all available scions, which are scarce, and will not know until next fall how many plants will be available. We have received many requests for these two outstanding new Camellias and are listing each inquiry in numerical order. Each of those who indicate they want these varieties will be furnished an order blank, at which time we will announce the price at which they will be offered, allowing them a reasonable time for a reply.

CAMELLIA JAPONICA "Bessie Morse Bellingrath"

Camellia japonica "BESSIE MORSE BELLINGRATH" was named for a beautiful, lovable lady who, as co-founder of the world famed Bellingrath Gardens near Mobile, Alabama, contributed immensely to the development of the love for beautiful flowers among people.

This Camellia variety was imported from Japan by Semmes Nursery near Mobile, Alabama, in 1939 and was first sold by them in 1942 under the American name "Bessie Morse Bellingrath." Its Japanese name was "Toki-No-Hagasane," which was translated by the original importers as the "Crested Ibis," of folded feathers.

It is very fitting that such a delicate, beautiful Camellia be named to honor Mrs. Bellingrath for she and Mr. Bellingrath gathered together and planted in their gardens one of the finest and largest collections of Camellias in the world, along with the thousands of Azaleas and other flowering plants, making it a floral heaven at any season one visits the gardens.

Mr. Bellingrath has made an exquisite 20-minute 16mm sound color film of Bellingrath Gardens which is available to groups or clubs FREE. Write Bellingrath Gardens, Mobile, Alabama, a month or more in advance of show date. Over 150,000 people visit the world-famed, beautiful Bellingrath Gardens each year. Plan to visit "The Charm Spot of the Deep South" soon.
